What type of environment do you prefer in a residence hall? At Emory & Henry, as a first year student, you may choose either a 'quiet hall' or a 'traditional hall.' Some students think that quiet halls are places where students are unfriendly and have no fun. In reality, the students who apply for quiet halls are simply asking for the option to meet with fellow students and vote whether to have some 'quiet hours' beyond those required by the college. Quiet halls are helpful to students for whom noise is a distraction from studying.

Hall preference: Quiet: Operates under special conditions and rules which foster a sound academic environment within the residence itself.

Traditional: Governed by the standard rules and regulations outlined in the Emory & Henry Student Handbook.
