

Costs of Study Abroad

Emory Abroad (EA) Courses

There is no additional tuition for the EA courses offered during the regular semester; however, students must pay a program fee, which varies by course.

If students wish to use financial aid to help with the EA course program fee and the additional expenses associated with these programs, they should meet with a representative in the Centralized Student Assistance (CSA) office to determine what aid will apply. This meeting should take place before the student applies to the EA program.

Eligibility for EA Courses

- 2.75 GPA, though special cases may be considered.
- Permission of the Faculty Leader
- No students who are currently on academic, behavioral, or financial probation may study

Exchange Programs

Emory & Henry College has exchange partnerships with the University of Nottingham and the University of Exeter in England, as well as the Université de Picardie Jules Verne in France.

If students are interested in an exchange, they should contact Dr. Celeste Gaia, Director of the International Education Office, as soon as possible because participation in these programs is limited.

When students participate in an exchange, they pay the regular tuition to Emory & Henry College and pay the housing costs to the university abroad. The $2000 semester abroad fee is waived for the exchange programs.

Scholarships and Grants

See <http://www.ehc.edu/academics/study-abroad/scholarships#scholarships>

Semester Abroad Study

Emory & Henry College has a list of approved programs from which students can choose. Students typically stay enrolled at E&H while they are abroad for a semester. Programs available include (1) those with which E&H is affiliated (see list under semester abroad study), (2) Exchange programs, and (3) the E&H service/internship program in Dublin, Ireland.

In most cases, students pay to Emory & Henry College the regular Emory & Henry tuition, the cost of the housing abroad, any additional fees required by the host institution (e.g., meals, insurance, lab fees, etc.), and a $2000 semester abroad fee. This fee is waived for the Exchange and E&H Dublin programs.

Students are responsible for passport and visa fees, travel to the location abroad, as well as regular living expenses.

Students who plan to study abroad for a semester should see Dr. Celeste Gaia, the Director of International Education, as soon as possible to find a program that fits with their professional goals and to become familiar with the semester abroad application process.

Eligibility for Semester Abroad Programs

- Deadline: Students must apply by December 1 the academic year prior to study.
- GPA Requirement: 2.75, though some programs may have a higher standard.
- Application: The selection for study abroad is a competitive process and requires the semester abroad application, an essay describing why the student wants to study abroad and how it fits with his or her professional goals, three references, and information about the program where the student desires to study. The application can be found on this website under Forms.