The Clery Act: Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Emory & Henry College

Context of the Law

The Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics Act, or Clery Act, established the right of students, parents, and employees to know about crimes committed on campuses and about campus security policies and procedures. By having colleges and universities disseminate such information, Congress intended to increase the level of campus security awareness by providing information needed to make informed decisions. Emory & Henry College presents the following information in accordance with the regulatory requirements of the Clery Act.

Campus Security and Safety: A Shared Responsibility

Located in a rural setting, Emory & Henry College has historically had a safe and secure environment. That is not to say that crimes and arrests do not occur, for they do. However, acts that threaten one's safety are not characteristic of this community.

One of the significant reasons for this is the very nature and character of those that make up the college community—the students, faculty, and staff—accept responsibility for their own and others' safety and cooperate with campus security officers and residence hall staff, among others, in trying to protect persons and property. We recognize that in a close-knit community like ours, we should continue to rely on one another and to follow sound practices if we are to sustain a safe and secure campus environment.

Students should be familiar with the Code of Conduct and abide by these precepts and regulations. They should also encourage other students to abide by the Code to enhance the quality of life on campus and to diminish the number of threats to safety involving students and others.

Access to Campus Facilities and Security Policies

Students, faculty, staff, and other employees of Emory & Henry have access to academic, administrative, and recreational facilities on campus. Access to residence halls is limited primarily to students and their guests. Guests may visit residents in student's room during visitation hours or in the 24-hour lounges.

The general public is welcome to attend most cultural and sports events, unless otherwise stipulated. However, the general public does not have access to the campus or college facilities on a regular, routine basis. Exceptions are made for specified community service programs and public relations purposes.

The Physical Plant maintains campus physical facilities with sensitivity to safety, for example, proper maintenance of campus lighting on walkways and in parking lots, trimming of shrubbery, etc.

When classes are in session, the outside doors of the residence halls are locked by 11:00 p.m. Each residence hall room has a door lock, and students are encouraged to keep their room keys on their person and to lock their room doors at night and at all other times when the room is not occupied. The Code of Conduct works well, but with guests often present, especially on weekends, the residence halls become much more "public." Thus, prudence is encouraged.

Emory & Henry College compiles this data for its annual report, as required by the Campus Security Act, in accordance with definitions used in the FBI's Uniform Crime Reporting Program (UCR). The report can also be accessed on the Internet at <http://www.ope.ed.gov/security/> and <http://www.ehc.edu/pdfs/securebrochure.pdf>

Students should take common sense precautions to protect their personal property, such as marking stereos, cameras, televisions, computers, and the like. Valuables left in a car should be locked in the trunk, if applicable, and the motor vehicle itself should be locked when parked.

During holiday periods students are expected to secure their own belongings by locking room doors and windows when the room is vacated.

Students are urged to report to Campus Police/Security officers or other personnel, as appropriate, any suspicious-looking individuals whom they believe do not belong in their residence halls or other College buildings and any troubling, unusual incidents in or around residence halls or elsewhere on campus.

It is the policy of this College to disclose to victims of violent crime the results of any disciplinary actions taken against those who violate the Code of Conduct in this context.

Authority of Campus Police/Security Officers

The College's Campus Police/Security officers are sworn Conservators of the Peace with powers of arrest. Officers receive training in the use of firearms, in traffic control, and in arrest procedures. They also receive additional in-service training to upgrade their skills.

The jurisdictional authority of Emory & Henry Police/Security officers includes the campus and a limited area beyond the boundaries of the College.

Campus Police/Security officers work cooperatively with the Virginia State Police and with the Washington County Sheriff's Office. Our officers prepare written incident reports for their own internal use and for record-keeping purposes. Also, the Campus Police/Security Department on a voluntary basis seeks information from local and state police jurisdictions on any crimes committed or arrests made off-campus involving Emory & Henry students and student organizations.

Alcohol and Other Drugs: Policies and Educational Programs

You should be aware that Emory & Henry complies with the Drug Free Schools and Communities Amendments by making students and employees aware of laws pertaining to alcohol and other drugs and by actively discouraging the violation of these laws.

Should any member of the campus community feel that they need assistance with a drug or alcohol problem, staff members are available to direct them to resources. The Student Health Center, The Powell

Resource Center, and Student Life have contacts with various agencies and professionals who have expertise with these issues.

HOW TO GET HELP: Reporting Criminal Actions and/or Emergencies

The Campus Police/Security Office is located in Martin Brock. It is the policy of the College to have campus security personnel and/or other appropriate staff respond to any reported crime or emergency involving a threat to personal safety and security or to enlist the help of local police agencies or emergency services, such as the Washington County Sheriff's Office, which can be reached by calling 911.

For direct telephone access to the Campus Police/Security Office, in non-emergency situations, dial 944-6222, or campus extension 6222. If security is not in their office please leave a message. By leaving a message, the telephone system will alert the officer on duty via remote notification and they will respond to your message. In case of emergency, call 911 and Central Dispatch will immediately contact a Campus Police/Security officer through the police communications system. Officers are on duty 24 hours per day. The dispatcher can also call for assistance from the Washington County Sheriff's Office, who work independently or cooperatively with Campus Police/Security officers, as the situation requires.

If you feel threatened or have a safety or security concern and are unsure of what to do, your RA—or any other RA—can be of assistance, as can the Head Residents, the Area Coordinators, Student Life Staff, and the Dean of Students.

Where the nature of a problem is such that other support devices are required, such as counselors and health services professionals, Campus Police/Security officers or personnel in the Dean of Students' office will make the contacts, as deemed necessary.

You are urged to report all acts of violence or crimes, including theft, to Campus Police/Security personnel, the Dean of Students or members of the Dean's staff, or RA's. All crimes must be reported no matter when they are discovered. Follow-up action will be taken to investigate each incident so that accurate records can be maintained.

It is well known that many acts of violence, including sexual abuse situations, occur when one or more of those involved have abused alcohol or other drugs and are under their influence. The possession and use of alcohol is prohibited on the Emory & Henry campus. Caution is urged when one is in a setting where alcohol is present and those who do consume alcohol are reminded that they are expected to do so in a responsible manner consistent with the law.

Students receive educational information about alcohol through orientation for new students, programs in residence halls, and other special events conducted on campus.

Campus Security Procedures, Practices, and Prevention of Crimes

From time to time, Campus Police/Security officers visit residence halls to talk with students about security procedures and concerns and to encourage crime prevention. Students and employees are regularly encouraged to be responsible for their own security and that of others.

Everyone should be aware that the College gives timely notice to the community when certain types of crimes are reported to campus authorities or local police agencies if such crimes are considered a threat to students and employees. These notices should be heeded, for, in practice, such a notice would be infrequent and should command special attention. Notice is made in a variety of ways, depending upon the situation, through the campus email system, campus voicemail, the e-alert system, and by posting notices at strategic locations on campus. For immediate notification, the emergency siren is activated on campus. When this siren sounds, members of the campus community should immediately check their voicemail, email, and/or cell phones for emergency alert messages.

E-Alert Registration

Our emergency notification system is capable of sending notifications instantly and simultaneously to all registered mobile phones, wireless PDAs, Blackberry's, pagers, Smart or Satellite phones, and everyone's email address. This is an OPT-IN program, so you must register in order to receive these specific alerts. To register, go to www.ehc.edu and click on Campus Alert System located at the bottom right of the homepage. This will take you directly to the registration form. Have your cell phone with you and on when registering. If you are registering a mobile cell phone number, you will need to make sure that you are receiving a signal when you register so that you can receive a validation code to complete the registration process. These messages are sent as text messages to cell phones and any applicable charges from your carrier will apply.
