COLLEGE

“You must get up, rise up and focus—and when somebody asks where you went to college, you stand tall and say, ‘Emory & Henry,’ in the prosperous, life-giving, music-shaking, soul-quaking, intellect-making hills of Southwest Virginia in Appalachia where America found her voice because unto those hills, through them and over them, came you.”

Adriana Trigiani, best-selling author, film director,
Southwest Virginia native and co-founder of The Origin
Project, in her address to the graduating class of 2018.

We are the region's oldest college and have the prettiest backyard.

An Appalachian Campus

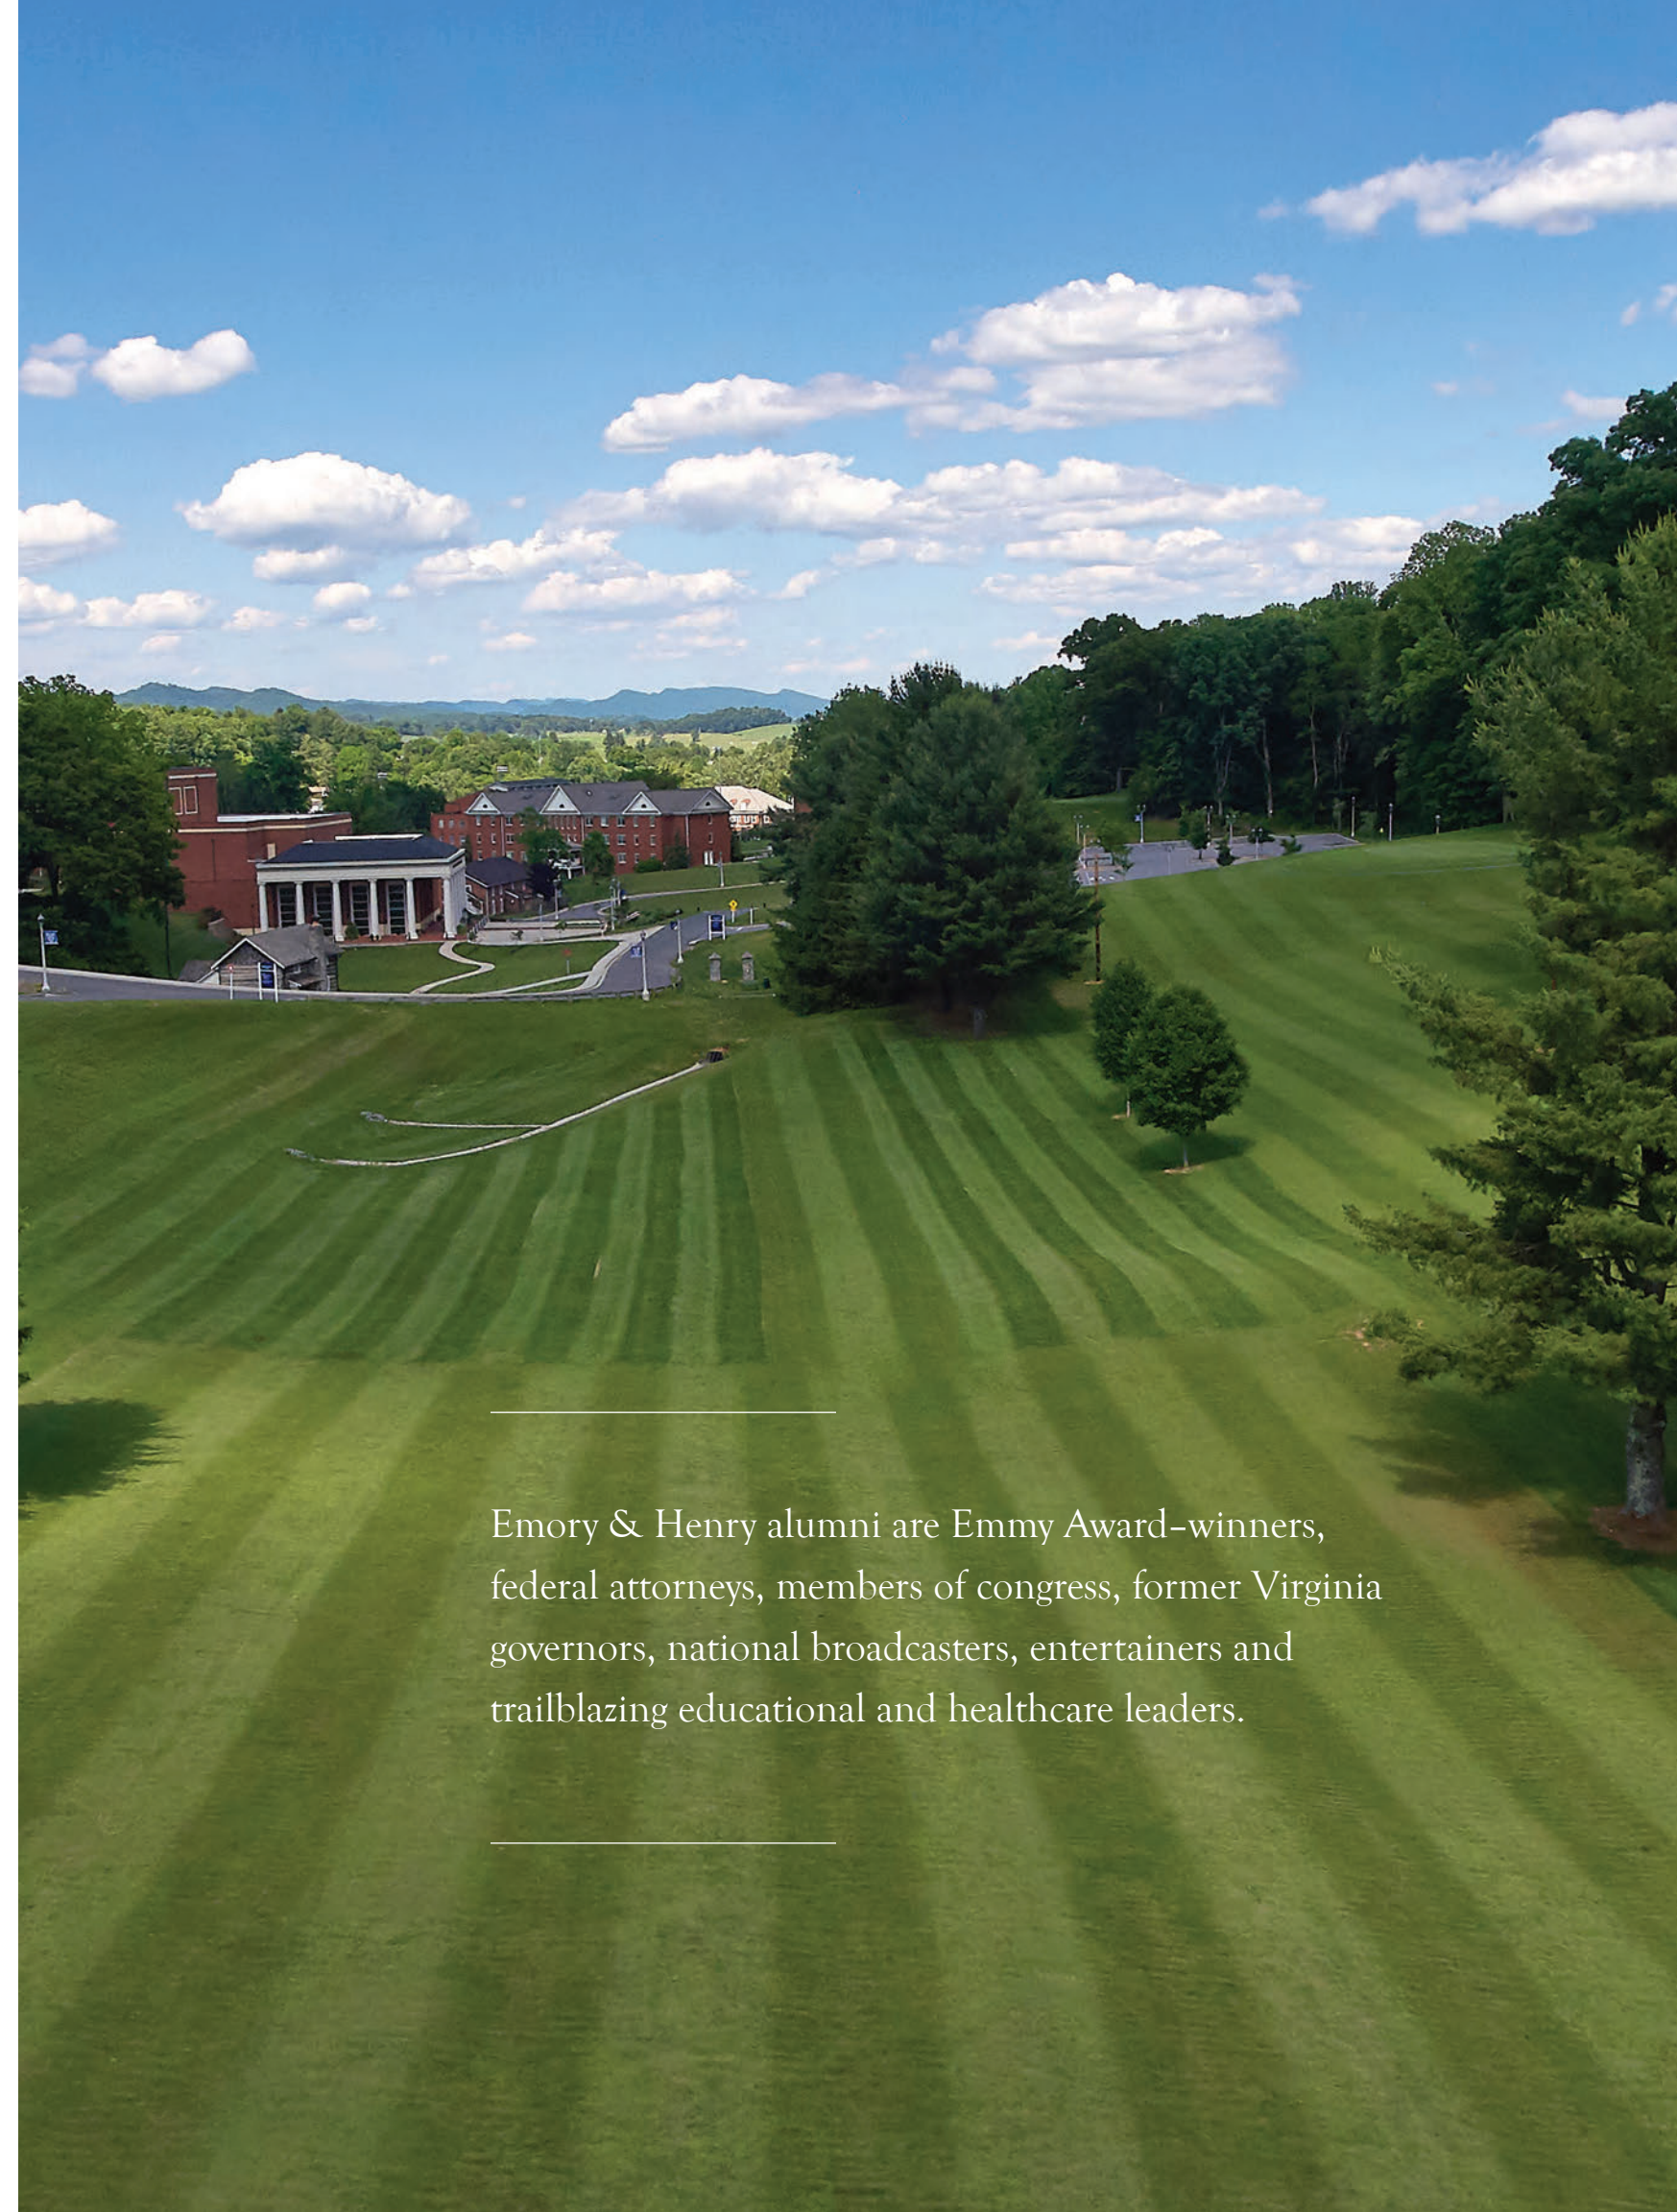

Appalachia is a singular place in the world. This unique, beautifully complex area is our home; at Emory & Henry, we're determined to understand and serve it better. We carry with us a history and sense of place that reflects the intricacies of America: it is mysterious, beautiful and sometimes flawed. We believe that we can make a great impact on the world by starting in our own backyard. To live among these hills and in the communities that fold into them demands that you be aware of, examine and participate in the remarkable implications of what it means to live in Appalachia—indeed, what it means to live in America.

The academic curriculum at Emory & Henry embodies a responsible and relevant (and award-winning) approach to educating the whole person, capable and driven by the understanding of how deeply our lives are intertwined with one another. This integration directly affects the impact we might make to improve our places in the world.

From the classroom to the mountains, internships to the winner's podium, Emory & Henry students have the literal and figurative space and support to find college success here. That success continues after college with real results. Our approach works. Emory & Henry alumni are Emmy Award-winners, federal attorneys, members of congress, former Virginia governors, national broadcasters, entertainers and trailblazing educational and healthcare leaders. Our programs engage students who are passionate about serving, education and civic engagement. One hundred percent student-focused, our supportive educational and social environment is secured by a strong web of connection among our campus communities. This is a place of opportunity, compassion and results.

Emory & Henry alumni are Emmy Award-winners, federal attorneys, members of congress, former Virginia governors, national broadcasters, entertainers and trailblazing educational and healthcare leaders.

Nestled in the mountains of Appalachia stands our nearly 350-acre campus. Breathtakingly beautiful and historic, our campus was founded in 1836—which makes us the oldest college in Southwest Virginia. Parts of our campus are even listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

We are consistently ranked among the nation’s best private liberal arts institutions—where comprehensive learning prepares students for the world of work. The College’s many accolades include the Presidential Award for Service Learning, the highest national recognition for community service and service learning; top-tier recognition in Washington Monthly, USA Today, Newsweek and a spot among the top 40 schools in *Colleges that Change Lives...*just to name a few.

RESIDENTIAL LIFE

Living on campus is a unique experience and an integral part of college life. Approximately 80 percent of Emory & Henry students live on campus in 19 residence halls that range from large hall communities to small houses and townhouse apartments. The historic campus maintains the scenic beauty of our region and gives convenient access to its activities and culture.

STUDENT SUPPORT

The Powell Resource Center assists all students in achieving their goals—academic, personal and professional. The PRC provides a comprehensive support system, based on students’ individual needs, to help them through their college experience and beyond.

The array of services available in the PRC include academic support, counseling, disability support and quantitative learning resources. Whether you are seeking assistance with learning how to study, managing stress, or accessing campus with a disability, the PRC is ready to help. Services are free, confidential and available upon request.

SPIRITUALITY

Although affiliated with the United Methodist Church, we welcome individuals of all belief systems. We have several types and styles of gatherings, some large and some small. Whether you come to college with a strong background in your faith tradition or are searching for spiritual meaning and purpose, you will soon find that you are not alone. Spiritual life groups offer support, encouragement and a reminder that college life is not always about the next paper or exam.

AFFINITY PROGRAM

Emory & Henry offers students the opportunity to connect with other students who share their talent or interest through our Affinity Program. Many of our incoming students take advantage of these groups, such as Marching Band, competitive Cheer and Dance, Outdoor Adventure Team and Civic Leader Scholars. The Affinity Program helps to bring incoming students together into the Emory & Henry community.

In addition to receiving scholarships, students in the Affinity Program create lasting bonds with their peers, faculty, staff and community members. This is a program devoted to our students’ successes, not only in college but in their future careers. We encourage students to strengthen their relationships with one another through a wide range of activities that blend human interactions with pursuits of the mind and body, ultimately adding to a more well-rounded experience and education.

INCLUSION & DIALOGUE

The Inclusion & Dialogue Center at Emory & Henry is a welcoming home for exchange about diversity and inclusion. The I.D. Center seeks to create, engage, encourage and empower a community that strives to be inclusive of all. Through social and educational programming, advocacy for social change and its resources and support, the I.D. Center serves as a model for excellence and a safe space for all people to share their perspectives and experiences.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

In addition to participation in groups dedicated to service to the community and the greater good, the average Emory & Henry student excels beyond the classroom in co-curricular programs. Student organizations, intramural sports, outdoor adventures, spiritual groups and residence hall programming offer students opportunities to meet new friends and to make connections outside the classroom.

From bass fishing, Greek life and student government to broadcasting on our solar-powered 9,000 watt, NPR-affiliated college radio station, WEHC 90.7 FM, there are dozens of ways to connect with other students who share your interests. Better yet, try something new or start your own organization! You’ll make those lasting connections that benefit you years after you graduate.

“My grandmother always used to say, ‘there is a corner in the world that is meant just for you.’ Well, this is my corner, my place, despite being 5,000 miles away from home in Macedonia. Emory & Henry has given me the chance to be a first-generation college student and to grow as an individual through many unique opportunities and challenges. I am so thankful.”

Increase in Excellence

Emory & Henry has devoted itself since 1836 to the belief that education can have a transformative effect on an individual, a place and ultimately the wider world. Our educational program aims to nurture the moral compass and character our students possess and to encourage them to put their values to work in the world.

Comprehensively supportive and challenging, Emory & Henry gets students where they want to be. Here, education isn't the goal in itself; it's the tool kit you will use to succeed. In the future, you will do something—something with meaning, something that perhaps makes a difference to “the way things have always been”—because of your education. You'll have to navigate the complex world without having immediate, given answers to questions like, “What's the right next step?” or “How can I help here?” You will develop a resourcefulness at Emory & Henry that will carry you through the challenges of your life.

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, there are eight strengths important to career readiness: critical thinking/problem solving; oral/written communications; teamwork/collaboration; digital technology; leadership; professionalism/work ethic; career management; and global/intercultural fluency. Emory & Henry's approach to the development of independent thought and purposeful action ensures its students expand their capacities for each strength both in the classroom and outside it so they are not only well-educated but, quite importantly, employable.

Equipped with a balanced set of strengths, our students engage intellectually, integrate knowledge and essential skills, expand their curiosity and embrace learning and service as lifelong commitments. Over four years, undergraduates encounter topics that arise from the arts, humanities, sciences and religion; they develop thoughtful responses to ethical questions and seek to understand their political and social responsibilities as citizens in an interconnected world. With such an education, our graduates continue to increase in excellence, as they did on campus, their whole lives long.

AMPERSAND EXPERIENCE

We believe students “grow by doing” through undergraduate research and creative projects, community-engaged work, internships, student athletics and other integrative, hands-on experiences. Research shows that students practice and retain a high capacity for leadership, collaboration, perseverance and resilience in engaged-learning environments. Through project-based work, students graduate with more than just a diploma; working in this way emphasizes the connections between people—faculty, staff, other students, community partners, alumni—and among different disciplines and activities. This engagement creates a “whole” and unique experience for each student.

The Ampersand Center connects students to the world of work. “E&H Connects” bridges our students (and even our alumni) to employers through an integrated online platform. The Center also supports projects, counsels students on career exploration and supports a rich ePortfolio program.

BARTLETT-CROWE FIELD STATION

Students take their education outdoors at the Bartlett-Crowe Field Station. Diverse ecological communities of the Appalachian forest, field and river ecosystems provide a wide variety of opportunities for student engagement. Bird banding, salamander surveys, wetland restoration, aquatic chemistry research and more are all available at the 75-acre facility, conveniently located 15 minutes from campus.

INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION & STUDY ABROAD

Driven by the fundamental belief that global citizenship education and cultural exchange are essential to peaceful human relations and rights, Emory & Henry’s international education is more than study abroad. The college welcomes international students, and through the Office of International Education provides international student support services and cultural events for the campus at large. Global citizenship infuses every part of campus life from core courses to extracurricular activities.

Rated by Great Value Colleges and LendEdu among the top 25 study abroad programs for quality and affordability nationally, with more than 100 study abroad programs in 45 countries, Emory & Henry’s international education programs enrich learning experiences as students of all majors become engaged with other cultures, belief systems, languages and customs. The college partners with a variety of universities abroad including seven semester-long exchange programs, and also provides multiple E&H faculty-led, short-term study abroad programs involving travel and service throughout the world.

LYCEUM PROGRAM

Each year, we bring close to 100 concerts, lectures, theatre and dance performances, films, exhibits and poetry readings to campus to help enhance our students’ academic experiences. These programs expand students’ horizons through robust cultural experiences both on campus and in the community.

HONORS PROGRAM

Our honors program is open to students with a wide range of intellectual interests and boasts majors from every undergraduate department. Since its inception it has grown to include around 100 honors program scholars and more than 60 honors program alumni from 18 different states and two foreign countries.

TEACHING EXCELLENCE

Published authors and researchers, our faculty members excel both as teachers in the classroom and practicing professionals in their fields. Emory & Henry professors are ranked among the best in the nation and have the awards to prove it. They have earned more state and national awards than any other college faculty in Virginia: 21. Those awards include eight Virginia and U.S. Professor of the Year awards from the Carnegie Foundation, which has honored Emory & Henry more than any other college or university in the Commonwealth for teaching excellence.

KELLY LIBRARY

The library provides access to millions of books, ebooks and articles to support student learning and research. Students can access ebooks and online articles around the clock. Library staff are available to assist with research and information skills development. The library also provides collaborative space for group work and silent study space. The lower level of the library houses the IT Helpdesk, a computer lab and printers for student use.

“One of the things I appreciated most about Nepal’s culture is the way religion and spirituality intersect as well as how much Hinduism and Buddhism specifically intersect, coexist and complement each other so beautifully. Colleges That Change Lives, best-selling college guidebook by Loren Pope

THE APPALACHIAN
CENTER FOR CIVIC LIFE

At Emory & Henry, we believe that everyone has the abilities and skills to make a difference in the world—and you don’t have to wait until you graduate to start. Every year Emory & Henry students go to work using their gifts and talents, putting their dreams for a better world into action by finding solutions to real problems. From service-learning components of courses to ongoing long-term community-based projects to internships and volunteer work, you can participate in building strong communities from your first day on campus.

The Appalachian Center for Civic Life helps individuals and groups with short-term and extended service activities and establishes partnerships between the college and communities, rural and urban. The legendary Center is not just about volunteerism; it’s about creating positive social change and dealing with root causes of social inequities. As part of the educational community, the Center creates a nationally distinctive program of service and education, equipping students to be agents of social change in our region, our nation and the world. Focusing on the interconnection of place, citizenship, public policy and social capital, the Appalachian Center builds on its place-based model, creating new opportunities for service and learning in response to the long, environmental and human history of a place, acknowledging the persistence of a range of social and cultural conflicts.

“The Salt Trail means a lot to me because I’ve spent my four years at Emory & Henry running on it for Cross Country. I was lucky enough to find local resident Nancy Williams and work with her to formulate a senior project that involved the trail. My hope is that more people will use the trail to improve their bodies, minds and souls and that the maintenance of the trail will continue to link together the communities of Glade Spring, Emory and Saltville.”

“There are two core values that define us. The first is that every person, regardless of background or financial status or pedigree, has it within them to make a difference in the lives of their communities and their neighbors and they do not need to wait. They can begin making that difference here, now, as they make the connections. The second value is that every place has the potential to be a safe, healthy and good place for all its people. We leverage the one to achieve the other, to give tangible expression to them both.”

Dr. Tal Stanley (E&H '83) Professor and Chair of Civic Innovation

HEALTH SCIENCES

Rural families face unusual health challenges, limited access and a need for flexible patient-centered treatment. We prepare our students to provide skilled, compassionate care with an increased emphasis on meeting the needs of the underserved patient population in this Appalachian region.

In the former Smyth County Community Hospital located 20 miles from the main campus, the School of Health Sciences at Emory & Henry College launched in 2014 with the goal of preparing compassionate, highly skilled healthcare professionals who not only provide quality healthcare to their patients; but also actively engage in leadership and service opportunities within their professional organizations and communities. The School of Health Sciences includes two undergraduate programs housed on the main campus and four graduate programs at the 15-acre School of Health Sciences campus in Marion, Va.

Don't wait for your adventure. Jump in!

Your Emory & Henry experience extends to the places around you that make you naturally adventurous, creative, curious, competitive—to the places in you that feel perhaps a little bit wild. Here, we encourage students to pursue avidly their co-curricular potential along with academics. Our athletics fields, equine facilities, performing arts venues and miles upon square miles of wilderness set the stage for your adventure.

OUTDOOR PROGRAMS

We are the only college to offer Semester-A-Trail, a credit-bearing, semester-long experience on the beautiful and rugged Appalachian Trail.

Are you ready to explore the natural world? The Outdoor Program introduces students to the excitement and awe of hiking, backpacking, whitewater paddling, rock climbing and bouldering and more with responsibility and respect for our environment. Whether you want to get away for an afternoon climb or spend the whole semester hiking the Appalachian Trail, we promise endless chances to get out there and have fun.

The Outdoor Program runs trips and clinics on a weekly basis that are designed to be inclusive, regardless of experience. Trips include hiking in search of blueberries and viewing wild ponies and other wildlife at Grayson Highlands State Park, rock climbing at Hidden Valley, kayaking on the Holston River, backpacking at Mt. Rogers, the highest mountain in Virginia, and more—all within an hour of campus. The staff and student leaders who run the excursions are trained and equipped to provide the best possible outdoor experiences.

We take the outdoors so seriously, we offer scholarships for students who are passionate about it. Members of the Emory & Henry Outdoor Adventure Team may receive scholarships for backpacking, climbing, paddling and outdoor leadership. Outdoor Adventure Team members also have the opportunity to represent the College at conferences, regional events and competitions in whitewater paddling and bouldering/climbing.

“I hadn’t imagined I would be able to advance my skills to be able to comfortably run Class IV rivers in just three short years. I did it with the help of friends and the great directors of the Outdoor Program.”

EQUINE STUDIES & RIDING

We are an equine powerhouse. Intermont Equestrian at Emory & Henry boasts 20 national championships since 2001. Emory & Henry's IHSA, IDA and ANRC teams offer opportunities for students to gain competitive experience in hunters, jumpers, equitation and dressage.

In Bristol, 16 miles south of the main campus, our expansive Equestrian Center encompasses 120 acres of rolling hills and landscape, home of two indoor arenas and a large outdoor arena where competition and hands-on training prepare students for lives in the equine industry.

In the E&H Equine Studies Program, our students gain hands-on experience through undergraduate research in two majors or a minor in equine studies, as well as through coordinating and working horse shows at the E&H Equestrian Center and other venues.

Students are welcome to board their horses on-site or use any of our college-owned horses. Of course, petting our resident dogs and cats at the barn is a given!

VISUAL & PERFORMING ARTS

The Woodrow W. McGlothlin Center for the Arts was built to contribute to the intellectual and professional growth of our students by addressing challenging ideas and encouraging critical thinking while reaching the broader community. With state-of-the-art technology, rehearsal and performance spaces, the McGlothlin Center for the Arts complements classroom studies with an accomplished performing artist series and gallery schedule, as well as student and faculty presentations in music, theatre and the visual arts. The center is home to a public gallery with rotating exhibitions by emerging and widely-acclaimed artists.

If you're serious about pursuing a career in the field—our art, music and theatre departments can help get you there. With a variety of majors, ample performance and exhibition opportunities and passionate faculty, Emory & Henry College is recognized as one of the region's finest producers of accomplished artists. Strategically designed to maximize marketability for graduates, our pre-professional conservatory-style training is embedded in a rigorous small liberal arts college environment. Small class sizes mean personal attention and more opportunities for students—on stage and off.

Students work alongside nationally-recognized visual and performance professionals. Our unique and dynamic association with the Barter Theatre, the State Theatre of Virginia, gives our theatre department students hands-on experience with current theatre artists-in-residence. Additionally, the art and music departments are leaders of project-based learning and interdisciplinary engagement with portfolio development and professional preparation at the center of their missions. The art department hosts our longest running Emory & Henry Abroad program which involves E&H faculty-led travel to Italy.

Emory & Henry College Theatre Department students benefit from a powerful partnership with Barter Theatre, the State Theatre of Virginia, only 10 miles from campus.

ATHLETICS

Among the top benefits of participating in Division III athletics is the flexibility with which student-athletes can manage their varying academic, athletic and co-curricular pursuits while building their capacity for time management and resilience. Want to continue playing your sport while embarking on the pre-health track? Want to take part in community service initiatives while also contributing to your team on the field? Love your sport but want to join other clubs, too? Division III is the place for you.

On the field and in the classroom, our student-athletes pursue their goals with passion. The intercollegiate athletics program is one of the most celebrated parts of campus life at Emory & Henry College and has brought great excitement and recognition to the institution for more than 125 years.

The College currently sponsors 22 intercollegiate programs, including 18 NCAA D-III sports which compete in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC), two teams from the Intermont Equestrian program, and competitive cheerleading and dance squads. Recognized as ODAC Players, Rookies and Coaches of the Year, our athletic community is among the best in its class.

INTRAMURALS & CLUBS

Emory & Henry is proud to offer vibrant intramural and club sport programs through the offices of student life and campus recreation. There are currently club rugby, disc golf, bass fishing and outdoor adventure teams, and the college plans to add more opportunities in the future. Intramural sports include everything from flag football, volleyball and basketball to battleship, ping pong and even quidditch!

Among many state-of-the-art facilities including an indoor 25-meter pool, Emory & Henry has a nine-hole golf course and an 18-hole disc golf course that are free to students and open to the public.

“Emory & Henry College cultivates the desire to strive for happiness and success that extend beyond just the playing field or classroom. It was through those key undergraduate years that I was fortunate enough to find faculty mentors and lifelong friends who pushed me to grow both professionally and personally.”

The Bonner Program offers scholarships annually in return for eight hours of direct community service and two hours of reflection and participation in enrichment events per week.

Merit Scholarship

Emory & Henry awards students for their achievements with merit scholarships. Merit awards are based on your GPA, test scores and review of your application and performance in the admission process.

Southwest Virginia LIFT Initiative

Emory & Henry is proud to offer the SWVA LIFT Initiative, which provides students who meet the admission standards and are Federal Pell eligible the opportunity to attend with minimal out-of-pocket tuition cost and significantly low loan debt.

TRANSFER

Our community welcomes a broad range of students who have already completed some college courses. We offer agreements with all Virginia and many out-of-state community colleges that ensure a smooth transfer of most credits, thus shortening the time to complete your degree.

VETERANS / ROTC

Emory & Henry proudly serves veterans and their dependents wishing to continue their education with veterans benefits. In addition, we offer an Army ROTC cross-enrollment program to enable students to become commissioned officers upon graduation and to serve in the Army, Army Reserve or National Guard. Students must complete the 30-day training and can receive a stipend pending completion of other requirements and classes.

INTERNATIONAL

The Emory & Henry College community is comprised of students from many countries across the globe. We welcome applications from international and exchange students to contribute to the diversity of our campus.
